SEMINAR DESCRIPTION

Protect your company's most valuable asset — the Employees. We hear about it on the news on a regular basis in all types of settings. This topic is applicable to all organizations that have employees working at either fixed or field locations, but is focused on the home care/VNA environment. Organizations need to be properly prepared to address a variety of potential workplace violence situations that often have deadly consequences. Workplace violence is the second leading cause of workplace fatalities. Don't get caught unprepared! Other appropriate home care services safety topics may also be discussed.

The target audience for this seminar is all levels of managers who are responsible for safety management in the organization and/or provide authority/funding for developing workplace violence prevention and/or implement or educate safety policies related to violence prevention. Please come prepared to learn and to share any experiences that others may find beneficial during question and discussion time.

This training will provide attendees with the basics for delivering this training to their respective workforce but will also highlight the role they play in maintaining an environment which promotes safety for their employees through prescreening of clients, a reporting system for documenting incidents of violence, and empowering employees to have zero tolerance for escalating behaviors.
